

The defendant was sentenced in March 2016 to seventy (70) months of incarceration. The defendant contends that a post-sentencing change of the Sentencing Guidelines bears upon her sentencing. In support of her position, the defendant cites to a 2007 action by the U.S. Sentencing Commission; a 2003 Eleventh Circuit decision; the 2005 United States v. Booker decision of the U.S. Supreme Court, and a 2007 decision of the Ninth Circuit. The items cited by plaintiff do not amount to a post-sentencing change, as they occurred before the March 2016 sentencing date. Accordingly, the court finds that there has not been an intervening post-sentencing change that would have affected the defendant's sentence of imprisonment.

ORDER

IT IS, THEREFORE, ORDERED that defendant's Motion for Modification or Reduction of Sentence (#103) is DENIED.
